Thurſday, February 7. 1706.

From the Amſterdam and Leiden Gaz.

Vienna, January 26.

THE 17th Inſtant a great Tumult happen'd in this City. It was begun at Night by ſome Students of the Univerſity, who broke all the Lanterns in the Streets, and under pretence of driving the Jews out of the City, plunder'd ſeveral of their Houſes and committed other Diſorders, their Number being ſoon increas'd by the Rabble; but our Garriſon drawing together, fir'd among them, kill'd 7 of them, and took ſeveral others, and the reſt diſpers'd themſelves: The Rabble in the Suburbs got together likewiſe, and plunder'd ſome Houſes of the Jews that dwell there, but diſpers'd themſelves when they heard how the Tumult was quell'd in the City. Our Gates were kept ſhut the 3 following Days, and ſearch being made for the Ringleaders and buſieſt Fellows in this Commotion, ſeveral of them were ſiez'd, and will be ſeverely puniſh'd. We have confirm'd Advice from Tyrnau, that Prince Ragotski and 24 Senators of the confederated Hungarians, were to meet as Yeſterday at Miskolz 7 Leagues from Tockay, to agree upon Demands preliminary to a Treaty of Accommodation, in order to deliver them in Writing to the Miniſters Mediators. We are in great Hopes, that the Suppreſſion of the Inſurrection in Bavaria will contribute very much to the quelling of that in Hungary, becauſe the chief Malecontents entertain'd great Hopes, that a powerful Diverſion would be made in Bavaria in their Favour.

From the Paris Gazette, dated Feb. 6.

Straſbourg, Jan. 27. Letters from Ratisbon and Ausburg confirm the Defeat of the Bavarians the 8th of this Month by General Kriechbaum between Wilſhoffen and Allerſpach. Their Loſs in that Action, and the Intelligence they had given them, that an Army was drawing together at Landſhut with a great Train of Artillery, ſo diſpirited them, that General Kriechbaum having paſs'd the Inn at Paſſau, Scharding ſurrendred to him the 17th, Braunau the 19th, and Burchauſen the 20th, upon Promiſe of a general Amneſty. In the mean Time Collonel Arnan laid formal Siege to Chamb in the Upper Palatinate, and after he had batter'd it ſome Days, he forc'd it to ſurrender by Capitulation. But that Capitulation was ill kept, the Chief of the revolted Bavarians being detain'd upon ſham Pretexts, and many of the reſt with a great Number of Peaſants being kill'd or drown'd in endeavouring to eſcape. So likewiſe in Bavaria, notwithſtanding the Amneſty, ſeveral Perſons of Quality were taken up; and thus the Inſurrection of the Bavarians is ended.

From the Leiden Gazette, dated Feb. 4.

Baſil, Jan. 28. Several Officers and other Perſons of Note, ſent by the Elector of Bavaria to his Electorate to foment the Inſurrection againſt the Imperialiſts, are arriv'd at St. Gall and Roſhach on the Lake of Conſtance; but having been inform'd, to their great Mortification, that that Revolt is quaſh'd, they have written to their Elector for Orders. In their common Diſcourſe, when they ſpeak of the Bavarian Rebels that have been kill'd by the Imperialiſts in ſeveral Actions, they ſtyle them Martyrs, and innocent Victims, whoſe Blood cries to Heaven for Vengeance. It appaars by ſome of their Letters that have been intercepted, that they entertain ſome Hopes of reviving the Troubles in Bavaria, provided the French would make a ſtrong Diverſion on the Rhine.

From the Amſterdam Gazette, dated Feb. 12.

All the Accounts from Bavaria, give great Commendation to General Kriechbaum, whoſe good Conduct has contributed very much to the quieting of the Troubles of that Country: Among other Particulars they give us theſe following. That General, to terrify the Peaſants, advanc'd with the ſmall Body of Troops he commanded towards Scharding, caus'd 6 Houſes ſituate a League diſtant from each other in the Country adjacent to be ſet on Fire, and gave out that he would do the like by all the Villages he ſhould find in his march, unleſs the Peaſants would return to their Houſes. A Body of the Peaſants that were poſted near Scharding, believing the Evil to be greater than it was, preſently ſeparated themſelves, to run to their Houſes to ſave them from being burnt; and in their Way gave ſuch an Alarm to another Body of Peaſants that were poſted at a greater Diſtance from Scharding, that they all ran home too, to preſerve their Houſes. General Kriechbaum being inform'd of this, advanc'd in good Order, and enter'd Scharding without Oppoſition: He forbid his Soldiers to commit any Hoſtilities, and caus'd ſome Huſſars that broke his Order to be hang'd. There were at that time in Braunau 3000 Peaſants and Soldiers Deſerters, who had reſolv'd to defend themſelves manfully; but Baron Ocfort whom they had forc'd to put himſelf at their Head, perſwaded them to march out and meet General Kriechbaum, leaving but 120 Men to guard the Gates of the Town: Soon after, he took a pretence to go with a Party to get Intelligence of the Enemy; but inſtead of that made a ſudden Turn to Braunau, and according to Agreement between him and the Inhabitants, he ſent Word to General Kriechbaum that he needed but advance and the Gates would be open'd to him: While this was doing, the Peaſants march'd back, thinking to re-enter Braunau, but finding the Gates ſhut, and being inform'd General Kriechbaum was at their Heels, they diſpers'd themſelves and retir'd to their Homes. After this, Burchauſen ſurrendred to Collonel Hochenberg. In this Manner ended the Inſurrection in Bavaria.

The Count of Lewenſtein-Wertheim, Adminiſtrator of the Electorate of Bavaria, has written to the Imperial Court, that for preventing any future Inſurrection in that Country, 'tis his Opinion 6000 Men regular Troops ought to be conſtantly maintain'd in it; and that it would be beſt to diſmantle all ſmall Places, to ſpare ſo many Garriſons, and have Troops always ready to march as they ſhould be commanded.

From the Amſterdam Courant, &c. dated Feb. 9.

Ratisbon, Feb. 1. This Morning came Letters from Munich, dated the 29th of January, adviſing, that 4 of the chief Bavarian Rebels that had been taken Priſoners, viz. Captain Meyer, and Commiſſary Fuchs, and 2 other Perſons nam'd Senſer and Kutler, were put to Death on a Scaffold; the 3 firſt were beheaded, the 4th was quarter'd, and his Quarters are to be ſet up in ſo many ſeveral Places in the Country. Several others will be tried and executed; Muller the Prieſt who was taken in Chamb, is carry'd to Straubing, and Orders are expected from Vienna for degrading and executing him. Hans the Butcher, broke out of Priſon here [illegible], but was retaken upon

From the Leiden Gazette, dated Feb. 2.

Haguenau, Jan. 25. The French have reinforc'd the Garriſon of Saberne to ſo great a Number, that part of them are oblig'd to encamp without the Place under Tents and Barracks. They have drawn a great many Cannon out of Strasbourg; and if any Credit may be given to Deſerters, the Enemy perſiſt in their Deſign to come and force our Lines, in Order to ſuccour Fort Louis, but we continue to make the neceſſary Diſpoſitions for giving them a good Reception. The Schout and 5 or 6 other Inhabitants of Druſenheim, were brought Priſoners hither to Day, being charg'd with holding Intelligence with the French. Yeſterday the Garriſon of Fort Louis fir'd 3 Cannon-ſhot, but for what we cannot tell. Deſerters aſſure us, there is ſo great a Want of Proviſions in the Place, and eſpecially of Fleſh, that the Garriſon is come to eat Horſe-fleſh. T'other Day our Men poſſeſs'd themſelves of a Redoubt near that Fort, which will enable them to ſtreighten the Garriſon ſtill more.

From the Amſterdam Gazette, dated Feb. 9.

Biſchweiler, Jan. 31. The Enemy have lately made ſeveral Motions in the Upper-Alſace, and have ſummon'd the Peaſants to bring 450 Waggons to Strasburg, for what End is not known. Yeſterday the Garriſon of Druſenheim was reinforc'd with 250 Men and 4 Cannon, drawn out of Haguenau.

Haguenau, Feb. 2. We have receiv'd Advice, that the 450 Waggons the French had caus'd to be brought to Strasburg, are to be employ'd to fetch Wheat, Oats, and Hay from Lorrain, for ſtoring the Magazines that are making in ſeveral Places, for the Subſiſtance of their Troops. 'Tis confirm'd that the Garriſon of Fort-Louis is in great Neceſſity, and muſt be forc'd to ſurrender, unleſs they are very ſpeedily ſuccour'd, of which there is at preſent no likelihood.

From the Amſterdam Gazette, dated Feb. 12.

'Tis advis'd from the Upper Rhine, that the Governour of Druſenheim is carried Priſoner to Raſtad, being ſuſpected of a Deſign to betray that Place into the Hands of the French.
